who was a master of a dozen landuages and the author of several serious books. His bare arms and lega, his naked chest, his unkempt hair suggested only the sates. But that is the mistake that one must not make in India. Arabindo Ghosh knows how to wear the clothes, eat the food and age the fashions of the west. Hie has competed with European young men in college, and has won honors. He has challenged attention and admiration from the wits of London and Paris. He knows the world both east and west. And it is such as he who will awaken the test from its long slumber.
