IS ANOTHER SHIP WITH HINDUS ON WAY OVER?

Story Reaches Ottawa of a Second Expedition Coming to America.

Mr. Bird's Move Toward Court Is Causing Officials Some Anxiety.

Is It Better to Wait or Throw Hindus Out in Quick Time? Is Question.

Japanese Owners Cable for the Ship to Start, but She Needs Help.

Ottawa, June 19.—It is understood here that intimation has been received by an Empress liner which arrived at Victoria this week that another ship's party of Hindus is being organized to cross the Pacific. It is said that the new enterprise was organized by a wealthy woman of Calcutta, who was guaranteeing the proposed immigrants a dollar a day for two years after they arrived in America. The Komagata Maru party was organized definitely to go to Vancouver, but it is said that the second party is to go to "some port in Canada or the United States." The second party is sailing direct from Calcutta, but was said to be due to call today at Shanghai on the way. The department thinks that the arrangements may have fallen through when the difficulties of the Komagata Maru in Vancouver became known in the Orient, but there is no definite information on this point.

Fearful of the Courts.
Upon the developments of the next day or two will depend whether the 355 Hindus now aboard the Komagata Maru will be sent back to Hongkong or will be landed and take up at least temporary residence in British Columbia. It is idle to deny that the move of Mr. J. E. Bird in issuing a mandamus to bring the immigration officials into court on Monday morning is not viewed with some official apprehension. This is strengthened by the recollection that in the previous cases disposed of by Chief Justice Hunter the regulations were knocked higher than a kite.

There is a feeling that once the Hindus get properly into court some flaw will be found in the regulations which will allow the present party to enter. If this is so, and the men of the Komagata Maru are officially admitted, the officials think that the battle will all have to be fought over again when other ships with other parties of Hindus come from the other side of the Pacific.

The Alternative.
Against this tendency of allowing the matter to take its course in the courts, there is the alternative of taking the bull by the horns and forcing the departure of the ship. It is no secret that Chief Immigration Inspector Reid believes in the latter course as the best one.

"All that I know," said the inspector this morning, "is that once those Hindus get their cases well before the courts no man can tell how the matter will end. One thing is certain, it will mean an interminable fight in the courts with the issue in doubt for a long time, and there is always the chance that the Hindus will beat the regulations and get in."
